

Our Process & Remuneration

Our Remuneration

What is Remuneration?

Remuneration is the fee or commission we receive for work undertaken on behalf of both our clients and the providers. The amount of remuneration is related to the value of the advice we provide and the products we arrange for clients. There are different types of remuneration and different commission models:

Single Commission: this is where a payment is made to an intermediary shortly after a policy or product has been arranged with a provider and is based on a percentage of the premium paid/amount invested/amount borrowed.

Trail/Fund Based commission: these are ongoing payments paid at intervals throughout the life span of a product. Trail commission is based on the value of a fund (also known as fund based).

Clawback: This is an obligation on the intermediary to repay unearned commission to the Life Company. Commission can be paid directly after a contract is concluded but is not deemed to be 'earned' until after a specified period of time. If the consumer cancels or withdraws from the financial product within the specified time, the intermediary must return commission to the product producer.

Fees: In certain circumstances, it may be necessary to charge a fee for services provided or, you may choose to pay in full for our services by means of a fee.

Non-Monetary Benefits: We may also be in receipt of a non-monetary benefits such as:

- Attendance at product provider seminars
- Assistance with Advertising/Branding

Providers offer different commission rates, payable over different timelines. We choose the provider, product, and funds that we believe are best suited to a client's needs. To ensure that there is no provider bias based on their commission rates, we have chosen commission rates that are appropriate for the expertise, time and work that is involved in our process. This rate is applied across all providers (when possible).

The table below outlines the maximum commission rates that we receive from the product providers.
